

What happens when you have an immunisation?

It is important to have an immunisation, they can stop you from getting poorly in the future.

When it's your turn to have a immunisation you will be called to see the nurse. This might happen in your school, doctors surgery or clinic.

 You'll  be asked  to sit down  and the  nurse  will  check who  you  are. They  might  ask  your  date of birth or home address.

 The nurse  will  check  that  you  know  that  you're having an  immunisation  today  and  answer  any  questions you  have.

The nurse will ask to see the top of your arm.

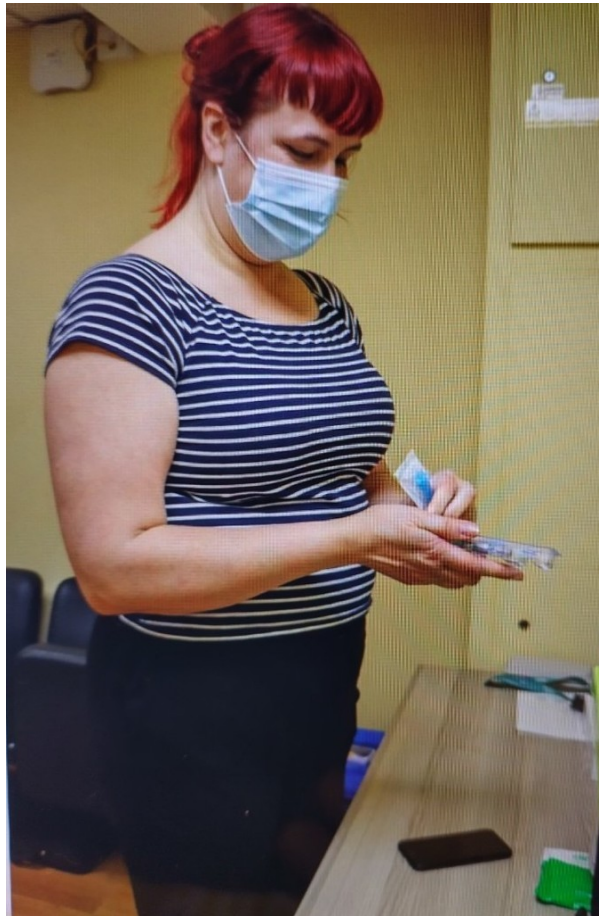

It's easier to wear a short sleeved t-shirt for your appointment.

Then you need to relax your arms and put them by your  side.

The nurse will get the immunisation ready.

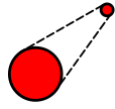

The nurse will put the medication in to your arm using a small needle.

This will take less than 5 seconds.

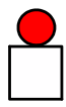

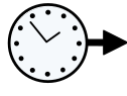

The nurse will remote the needle and put it in the bin.

Sometimes, the nurse will hold a piece of cotton wool

on your

arm

for a few seconds.

You can hold

the

cotton wool

yourself

if you prefer.

If you want a plaster, you can have one put on at the end.

When the nurse has checked you feel okay, you can leave.
